Now answer these same questions about your culture and point out the differences between your business culture and the business culture of the UK.
Since World War II, Britain has become increasingly diverse as it has accommodated large immigrant populations. The mixture of ethnic groups and cultures make it difficult to define British as looking or acting in one particular manner. The fact that the nation's favourite dish is now a curry sums up the cultural mish-mash that is modern day Britain.

Many older businesspeople or those from the 'upper class' rely heavily upon formal use of established protocol. Most British are masters of understatement and do not use effusive language. If anything, they have a tendency to say 'perhaps' or 'it could be'. When communicating with people they see as equal to themselves in rank or class, the British are direct, but modest. If communicating with someone they know well, their style may be more informal.
What is the greatest difference to your culture?
